HAYES AND WHEELER.

Rutherford B. Hayes, the Republican candidate for President, is a native of Ohio, and is about fifty-two years of age. He was educated at Knyon College, and while there was a classmate of ex-mayor Morriweather, of this city. After graduating at Knyon he entered the law department of Harvard University, and after completing the course began the practice of his profession at Columbus. He afterwards removed to Cincinnati, where he took high rank as a lawyer, and at the breaking out of the war was in the enjoyment of a very lucrative practice. When the Southern wing of the democracy rebelled Hayes threw aside his law books and briefs, and entered the service as Colonel of the 23d Ohio regiment, his first service being with Gen. Rosecrans in West Virginia. He served faithfully during the war, winning his stars by bravery and efficiency. In 1867 he was elected Governor of his native state, and re-elected in 1869. At the close of his second term he was elected a representative in Congress, and in 1875, when the party in Ohio was badly demoralized and it was necessary to select the most popular man to make the race for governor, Hayes was chosen without any effort on his own part, and was triumphantly elected after one of the most exciting campaigns ever known in the state.

It is useless to endeavor to conceal the fact that the sentiment of the Illinois Republicans was unmistakably for Blaine, and that the nomination of Hayes brought with it a keen sense of disappointment to the enthusiastic supporters of Blaine in this locality, but when time has been afforded for calm reflection the general verdict will be that the convention acted wisely in selecting the Ohio "dark horse." The animosities engendered by a campaign of unprecedented heat could have been allayed so well in no other way, and time will show that the nominee possesses more elements of strength, and will wield the Republican masses of the country more solidly together than any other man who could possibly have been chosen. He has an absolutely faultless record, and the campaign with Hayes at the helm—will be characterized by that aggressive spirit which is the very best augury of success.

William A. Wheeler, the candidate for Vice President, has for many years represented his district in the lower house of Congress, and is looked upon as one of the ablest and most upright members of that body. No man in the House is more popular among his colleagues, or enjoys a higher reputation for integrity, probity and ability. An exceedingly modest and diffident in disposition, he has never pushed himself forward nor attempted to bring himself into prominence, and yet he is looked upon by those who know him best as a man of rare mental powers. He is a self-made man, having risen from the most abject poverty by his own untiring efforts.

The ticket is made, and it could not be well improved upon. That it will be triumphantly elected in November there can be no least doubt.

The unexpected nomination of Hayes has knocked the bottom out of a good many democratic calculations. Among the rest may be mentioned the fact that our democratic neighbor of the Times has in type a long editorial on Blaine, which the seventh ballot rendered entirely useless. There's no telling how much democratic abuse was heaped by the result of that ballot.

A bee culturist of California has been interviewed, and so immense a story elicited from him that it is doubtful which is the more immense, the honey-producing capacity of the average California swarm of bees or the narrative of the interviewed. He claims that the State is peculiarly adapted to conducting that business successfully, as the weather the larger portion of the year is favorable for the bees working out of doors, and flowers bloomed nearly the year around. He often secures from 350 to 400 pounds a season from a single hive, and has taken as high as 600 pounds. During the past year he has been able to put on the market 60,000 pounds of strained honey, and expects this year to increase it to 100,000 pounds. About an acre of ground suffices for the purpose, as his little workers forgo all his neighbors' fields, and feed upon their flowers without doing any harm to the property of others or getting themselves arrested for trespass. He now ships his honey in barrels the same as syrup, and claims that he can lay it down in Chicago at a less price than home made bogus honey can be manufactured for, and then pocket a nice profit. Young men, if you are in hard luck in Illinois, don't start for the Black Hills or the San Juan, "don't buy a printing office and go West," but strike out for the "golden bee country," where honey rhymes with money and "the little busy bee" produces his half pound of the former every twenty-four hours.

The tariff plank adopted at Cincinnati is a reassertion of the position of the party from the first on the question of protection to home industry. Most of the language has been reproduced from the resolution in the national platform of 1860, the meaning of which has been settled and illustrated by fifty-two years of protective legislation. The interests of American labor cannot without it be promoted, nor the prosperity of the whole country either advanced or maintained. It was met that the tariff plank should have been received by the convention with applause. Its principles can be conclusively defended before the people; it must powerfully appeal to the laboring masses for support; and it will unquestionably prove an element of strength in conducting the Presidential campaign.—Inter-Ocean.

GEORGE BLISS, a man about 30 years of age, son of a prominent physician of Carthage, N. Y., went into a barber shop at Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 24th ult., and requested to be shown a razor. He took the weapon, went to a leather strap used to sharpen it, and rubbed it up and down gently for some moments, then went over to the mirror, and, lifting up his chin, drew the razor across his throat, making a frightful wound, from which blood flowed in torrents. The windpipe was severed and neck gashed horribly. Bliss' relatives are reported to be very wealthy, and the young man traveling about the country in hopes of curing himself of a desire for opium, from eating which he has been long a sufferer.

A MAN in Burlington, Vt., of an investigating turn of mind, a week or two ago determined to try it with the rats which infested his house. He purchased a supply of coal tar at the gas works, and placed small quantities in the rat holes in his cellar and elsewhere in their runways. The rats baiting themselves, became disgusted with their manner of entertainment, speedily left the premises, and have not been seen or heard from since.

It is suggested that while the threatening aspect of affairs in Europe forbodes war and further prostration to business there, such a disaster to Europe would be to our advantage as a commercial people, especially as our nation is entirely out of the tangle involving our great competitors in trade. We certainly would find some consolation in the fact that the markets of the world would be at our control, with enlarged demands of all kinds of products and manufactures, including a demand for munitions of war which would get some of our almost dormant industries vigorously at work, while not the least beneficial effect upon us would be the simplifying of the currency question which would result from the influx of solid money from our foreign markets. Thus men will calculate over in the face of such a calamity as war; but whatever the advantage to us we may still hope that war in Europe may be averted if possible.

LEW. STURWARD, who runs a saw mill over on Big Rock, near Plano, and puts Confucius ahead of Christ, was in this city Thursday. He came over doubtless to see the "opposition" editors who were here. He is the Decatur candidate for Governor, which fact the people of Will county seem determined to ignore, and would totally forget it were they not occasionally reminded of it through the columns of the Sen.—John et Sin.

WHAT'S THE MATTER?

Maj. T. J. Abol, of this city, who has been attending the Cincinnati convention, must have been excited somewhat yesterday on the nomination. About 7 o'clock we received the following telegram from him:

CINCINNATI, June 16.
TO THE DAILY REPUBLICAN:—His name is R. B. Hayes—seventh ballot—Blaine 351, Hayes 384.
T. J. ABOL.

In half an hour afterwards another telegram came from him, varying not a single word from the first. Evidently the Major was determined that we should understand who was nominated.

BRISTOW TO RESIGN.

CINCINNATI, June 16.—The convention was late in assembling. The convention was called to order at 10:35. Prayer by Rev. Mr. Morgan of the Episcopal church.

Before the balloting commenced, this morning, the chairman of the convention announced a meeting, to-night, of the national executive committee of the Union League of America, at the Barnum House, and read an invitation to the delegates to visit the House of Refuge, which was received with shouts of laughter. During the call of the roll for the first time, the gallery audience were so noisy and interrupted so by cheers, applause and hisses, that the chair rebuked them, especially in regard to the hisses, and intimated that unless order was preserved all balloting would stop. Maine's twelve votes for Blaine received loud applause from the gallery. A Mississippi delegate was absent, making the total vote fifteen, three for Blaine, twelve for Morton, Nebraska cast a solid vote for Blaine, which announcement was heralded with applause. Nevada, three for Blaine, two for Conkling, one for Hayes, without eliciting enthusiasm. Blaine's friends cheered when New Hampshire cast seven votes for Blaine and three for Bristow. The greatest shouting proceeded from Blaine's supporters, when New Jersey announced thirteen for Blaine and five for Hayes. The friends of the latter seemed somewhat downcast. Conkling men shouted for gladness when New York went almost solid for Conkling. North Carolina gave Blaine nine, Conkling seven, Bristow one, Morton two, which rejoiced the adherents of the two former candidates. Ohio cast her forty-four solid for Hayes, which caused cheers and hisses from ill-mannered people in the loft. When Pennsylvania gave fifty-eight for Hartman, the white hats were swung with enthusiasm. Morton's friends cheered South Carolina, which gave Morton thirteen, Bristow one. Bristow stood with better on ten from Tennessee, four from Texas and eight from Vermont, and his friends were again jubilant. The territories voted for Blaine, except Wyoming, which went for Bristow. The District of Columbia gave Morton two.

The following is the result for President:

[The result of the several ballots, up to the last one, having been given in our edition of yesterday, is now omitted.—Ed. REPUBLICAN.]

After the roll call had commenced on the seventh ballot, the New York delegation, by permission, withdrew.

amid some confusion, and returned just after Colorado had been called. When Indiana was called, Mr. Cumback, mounting the platform amid breathless expectation, said: Gentlemen of the convention—A very unpleasant duty is now imposed upon me as chairman of the Indiana delegation. In withdrawing from the further consideration of this convention the name of the great statesman, I express my deep regret as well as that of every delegate from Indiana, and every alternate and every citizen of Indiana who belongs to the republican party.—[Cheers.] When I say he stands in the senate of the United States the noblest of the best, I utter a truth that will not be disputed by any republican in the United States of America.—[Cheers.] But we feel the time has come for us not to ask, any longer, that our friends shall stand by us. We thank them for the support that they have given us in this convention. In withdrawing his name, Indiana casts 25 votes for Rutherford B. Hayes.

The cheering and applause and yells which followed this announcement lasted for fully ten minutes. The galleries were wild with excitement, gentlemen waving their hats and canes in the air, while the ladies used their handkerchiefs to show their predilections. After adding five votes for Hon. H. Bristow, Mr. Cumback returned to his delegation amid cheers.

Cheers came from every part of the hall when Kentucky was called, and Gen. Harlan stepped to the platform, when the applause subsided. He said: Mr. President and gentlemen of the convention, the republicans of the state of Kentucky feel deeply grateful for the cordial support which our distinguished fellow citizen, Col. Bristow, has received from the delegates of various states, both north and south. We feel especially grateful to those gallant men of Massachusetts, and Vermont and other states, of New England, which, when it was circulated from one end of this land to the other that Ben. H. Bristow was not to be president because he was born and raised in the south, stood by him. Massachusetts, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut have done him and us the honor to say that Bristow was true to the republican party. [Applause.] Without detaining you any longer, I have come up on this stage for the purpose of withdrawing B. H. Bristow, and casting the entire vote of Kentucky for R. B. Hayes.

[The cheering which followed this withdrawal for announcement was almost deafening, and came from all parts of the hall, with the accompaniment of hat waving, stamping and hand-clapping. It was one of the enthusiastic movements of the convention. Mr. Cumback then cast the other five votes from Indiana for R. B. Hayes. [Cheers for several minutes.] Col. Ingersoll rose to a point of order, but the excitement was so great he could not be heard. The scene at this point was almost indescribable. Numbers of the delegates mounted their seats, and waving their hats and fans, yelled "Hayes." The crowd in the galleries was equally as demonstrative. The noise continued for about five minutes, during which time Colonel Ingersoll maintained his position on the floor, to press his point of order, that the vote of Indiana could not be changed.

Mr. Edick of New Jersey—I raised a similar question some time ago and it was ruled out of order. He insisted on the ruling and the chair allowed Col. Ingersoll to speak. He made a point that it was out of order to change votes during roll call.

The chair decided that the change could not be made (great confusion). The change of Mississippi provoked another outburst. New York cast 61 for Hayes and 9 for Blaine. [Furious cheers.] Montana changed her 2 to Hayes. As soon as the roll call was announced, the victorious side abandoned themselves to shouts of triumph.—The chairman announced the SEVENTH BALLOT.

Total vote.	756.
Necessary to a choice.	379.
Hayes.	384.
Blaine.	351.
Bristow.	69.

The chairman said, Rutherford B. Hayes, of Ohio, having received a majority of all the votes cast, is declared the nominee of this convention for the office of president of the United States. It is moved that the nomination be made unanimous. On that, Mr. Fry, of Maine, has the floor.

Mr. Fry, of Maine.—Mr. President, I know, sir, that this immense and enthusiastic convention will pardon me if I say just one word of kindness and of thanks to the glorious supporters of our candidate, Mr. Blaine, who has had here. [Applause.] No words of mine can express the thanks which Maine gives to the men who stood by heras you have here to day. God bless you forever and ever. [At this point Fry's voice became almost inaudible.] I have done too much hallowing for James G. Blaine to preserve my voice. [Laughter.] We recognize the fact that the convention in its wisdom, has selected Hon. Mr. Hayes as its standard bearer in this next great contest for justice, for liberty, for humanity, and the state of Maine accepts and endorses fully and completely, and rejoices in the nomination of Mr. Hayes. [Cheers.] Our gallant chief, James G. Blaine, in September, shall take the field in the state of Maine, for the next year, have selected, and we will sweep the state for Hayes by twenty thousand majority. When we have finished Maine we will go forward under the lead of Blaine, into the good old commonwealth of Massachusetts, and we will sweep her, with their help [looking toward the delegation] by fifty thousand majority. Mr. Fry's voice at this point became so husky that he could hardly speak, and he said, it is useless for me to try to speak. My voice is gone. Judge Poland of Vermont—Let me suggest that you don't speak loud, but in your ordinary voice and we will keep quiet. Mr. Fry—[will close by simply saying, or making a motion, or seconding a motion, that the nomination of R. B. Hayes be made unanimous. [Defeating cheers.] The Chair—[The question is, shall the motion be agreed to, and it was agreed to without a dissenting voice. Chair—It is unanimously agreed to. [Cheers.] A motion was carried to proceed to the nomination of a vice president. Judge Poland nominated William A. Wheeler.

Gov. Hawley nominated Marshall Jewell. Judge Hear seconded Wheeler's nomination. Pratt, of New York, in behalf of a portion of the delegation, nominated Gov. Woodford.

Cumback seconded this. Haglan, of Kentucky, nominated Selden, of Mississippi, also seconded the nomination of Woodford. Another delegate presented Frothinghams. A delegate from Iowa seconded the nomination of Wheeler. Mr. Woodford, during the balloting, appeared on the platform and surrendered his claim in favor of Wheeler. When it became evident that Wheeler received over three hundred votes, Kellogg withdrew the name of Jewell and moved the nomination of Wheeler unanimous.

The convention then agreed to suspend roll call and make Wheeler's nomination unanimous. On motion of Howard of Michigan a committee of one from each state was appointed to wait on the nominees of the convention and solicit their acceptance on the platform.

The following telegram to Hon. E. H. Hall, was read:

WASHINGTON, June 16.
I hope that you will find it convenient to stop at Columbus, and give my congratulations and sincere personal respects and regards to Governor Hayes. [Signed] J. G. BLAINE.

Among the delegates appointed were the following: James P. Root of Illinois, John Y. Stone of Iowa, L. W. Osborn, Nebraska, Geo. C. Gorham of California, John P. Jones of Nevada.

The following resolutions were, on motion, added to the platform.

Resolved, [We present as our candidates for President and Vice President of the U. S., two distinguished statesmen of eminent ability and character and conspicuously fitted for those high offices, and we cordially appeal to the American people to instruct the administration of their public affairs to Rutherford B. Hayes, and William A. Wheeler.

Mr. Lewis of West Virginia, read a resolution of thanks to the president of the convention. Adopted.

Other complimentary resolutions were passed, and the convention adjourned sine die.

CINCINNATI, June 16.—A grand rally meeting was held to-night at Pirk's opera house. A committee of the Bristow club of this city waited on the Hayes club and invited them to take possession of the opera house. The large hall was filled to its utmost capacity, and all speeches were received with the utmost enthusiasm. The meeting was called to order by John Carlisle, who said that the club was once known as a Bristow club, but was now a Hayes club. He introduced Gen. Hawley, of Connecticut, who came forward amid deafening cheers, and after referring to the arduous labor they had performed, they were now ready to rest sweetly, being satisfied with the result of their work. [Cheers.] We don't deny that we suffered no little anxiety. This was the turning point in the history of the Republican party. I say more to you than I said frankly in the convention, it is not worth while to shut our eyes to the fact that there existed throughout the country not a little dissatisfaction, but the great body of the stanch, patriotic, indomitable Republican party stood by its colors. [Cheers.] But there were many with more or less dissatisfaction, who had left us. Of course a party that has been in power sixteen years has committed more or less blunders. It has made errors in appointments, in all the details of administration. It has made mistakes in legislation. The wisest man could hardly have failed to do this. We never shall find a party or administration that will conduct the affairs of the government in a satisfactory manner.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, June 17.—At two o'clock this morning the Hartman club of Philadelphia, headed by their band, and a large crowd of citizens, marched to the state house and were introduced to Gov. Hayes by Mayor Stokely. Morton McMichael, on behalf of the club, made a strong speech endorsing the Cincinnati nominations and promising that Pennsylvania would give Hayes and Wheeler forty thousand majority in November. Governor Hayes feelingly replied.

[SPEAKING of the personal appearance of the convention, the editor of the Toledo Blade, writing to his paper says:

The gathering is emphatically a meeting of chiefs. The United States Senate and House of Representatives will not surpass it in men of splendid build and bearing. The ancient gatherings of the English kings could not have surpassed it. One can but be proud of his race and his party as he sees these men whose stature towers up among the skies, whose coats button up solid rotundity, whose hats are crowned with brains, and whose eyes reveal great spirits and noble characters. No wonder the Republican party has held supremacy through war and peace for sixteen years.

CHICAGO, June 16.—The Tribune to-morrow, in an editorial commenting on to-day's nominations says: The convention won a double victory for the country in nominating the ticket which will be heartily accepted and endorsed by republicans and reformers, in all parts of the country. The convention has, it asserts, earned the thanks of the American people for the courage and devotion which it brought to the selection of a ticket, entitled to the respect and confidence of the nation, and for the firmness with which it rejected the other. The nomination is the triumph of reform, the triumph of the popular demand for the purification of the public service, and the restoration of responsibility and accountability in the administration of the government.

The Times says the nomination of R. B. Hayes for President by the Cincinnati convention is a surprise to the country, and a bitter disappointment to the party managers, whose combinations have thus been brought to naught. The article speaks of him as a quiet and rather obscure Ohio gentleman, who has failed to improve his opportunities to become distinguished. His candidacy will create no such furor as would that of Blaine, the magnetic partisan leader. Whether he can be beaten, will depend whether wisdom or folly shall prevail at St. Louis.

BLAINE TO HAYES.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Upon hearing of the nomination of Hayes, Mr. Blaine sent him the following telegram:

WASHINGTON, June 16.
To Governor R. B. Hayes, Columbus, O.: I offer you my sincere congratulations on your nomination. It will be alike my highest pleasure, as well as my first political duty, to do the utmost in my power to promote your election. The earliest moment of returning and commencing health, will be devoted to securing you as large a vote in Maine as also would have given for myself. [Signed] J. G. BLAINE.

Gov. Hayes replied:

COLUMBUS, O.—To Hon. J. G. Blaine, Washington, D. C.: Your kind dispatch has touched me most deeply, and I hardly know how to respond in fitting words. The assurance of your sympathy and support nerves me for the contest in which we are about to enter. With your returning health and strength I see an omen of Republican success. I trust all traces of your recent illness will speedily disappear, and that you may speedily be restored to your family and country. I send you my first dispatch since the nomination. [Signed] R. B. HAYES.

Out of hundreds of congratulatory telegrams received by Gov. Hayes to-night, the following are selected as expressing the sentiments of prominent Republicans throughout the country:

Senator Morton says: I congratulate you upon your nomination for the Presidency, and shall labor earnestly for your success.

Gov. Hartranft, of Pennsylvania, says: I most sincerely congratulate you upon your nomination. Pennsylvania will surely give you her vote in November.

Secretary Bristow says: I beg you to accept my earnest and hearty congratulations. Your nomination secures victory in November.

Postmaster General Jewell says: Accept my most hearty congratulations. Roscoe Conkling says: I heartily congratulate the country, the Republican party and you on your nomination; you need no assurance of the cordiality of my support.

WASHINGTON, June 16.—Secretary Bristow will resign the office of secretary of the treasury at the end of the month. His reasons for so doing are purely personal. His successor has not yet been designated.

The Chicago Times says: "In the republic called the Argentine, which does not seem by any means the argentitious, the paper currency has been made and kept equal to the wants of trade. There is $435 of it to each inhabitant. The only difficulty now is to make the trade equal to the wants of the currency."

An old gentleman went to the railroad station the other day. He had an old fashioned strap wallet, and taking it out of his pocket at the ticket window he inquired the price of a ticket, took the money out and let the wallet hang by the strap from his right chest while he made the right change. Suddenly he began prancing around the room, ostentatious in his face, and the wallet between his jaws, looking everywhere, under and behind seats, and finally waiting up to the ticket window again, he said, "Hayes" and dropped the long-lost wallet. He was going to say, "Have you seen my wallet?" How singular that old people should be so forgetful, he remarked, as he quietly seated himself in the cars.
